THE NEXT GENERATION OF HERITAGE

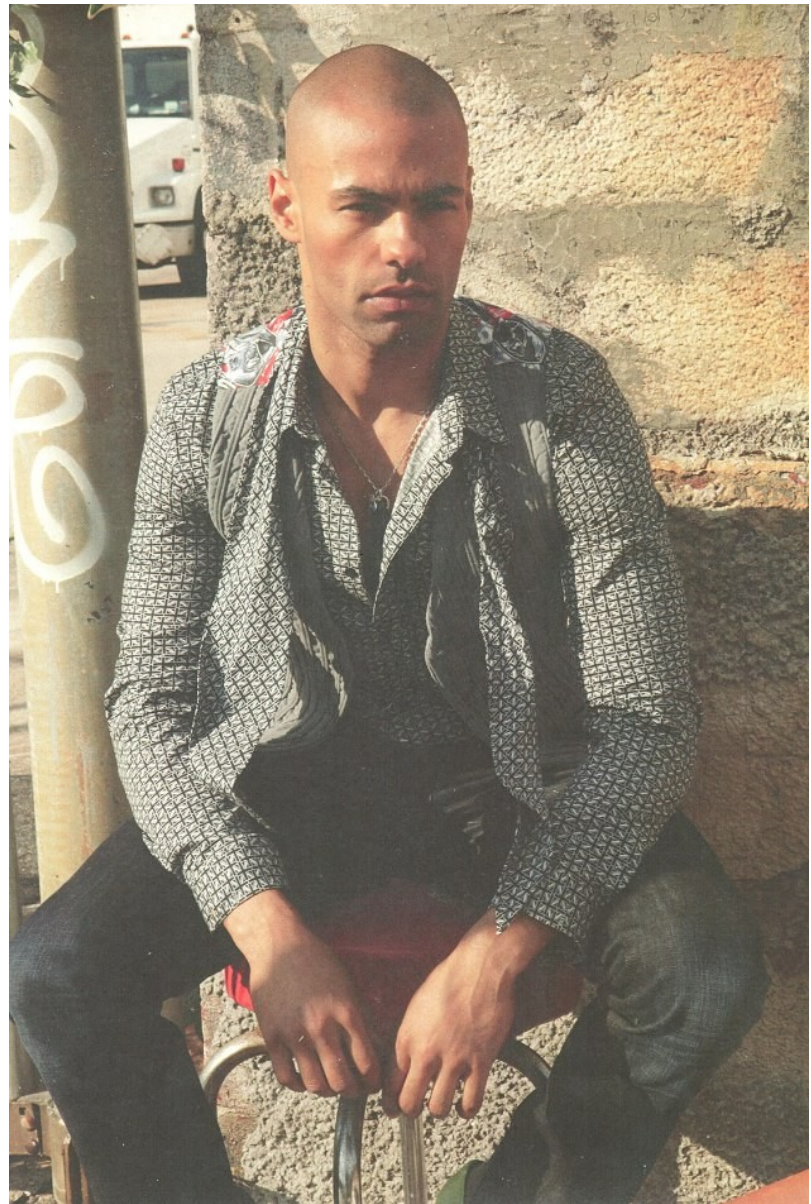

FOR A CLASSIC brand famed for its rugged authenticity, the dilemma is often how to modernize without leaving all that sweet, sweet heritage behind. For Belstaff, famous since 1924 for its waxed-cotton motorcycle jackets and military overcoats, the secret is to combine archival details with luxury materials. The despatch-rider's coat, shown here, is a case in point: True to the original construction, down to the grommets under the armpits and the leg tethers that stopped the coat flapping open while a man rode a motorbike at speed, it is made from a bonded techno cotton, a cloth that is altogether stronger, more resilient, and more luxurious than the traditional waxed cotton. This is progress we can get behind.

ON ROBB SHERMAN, actor and model: Bonded-cotton coat with detachable nylon warmer ($3,600), cashmere cable-knit sweater ($1,890), and cotton jeans ($395) by BELSTAFF; belstaff.com. Suede double-strap boots ($695) by O'NEILL; 888-774-2424.
